

Blue-Collar / Home-Services Owner-Operator Coaching Landscape

— And Where "Business Without You" Uniquely Fits

Deep research report. Date: 2026-06-25. Angle 05 of the Hormozi/Cardone blue-collar teardown.

Scope: who actually coaches trades and home-services owners ($500K–$10M revenue), what they promise, how they price, what language and proof move these owners, and the specific lane Cool Hollow Coaching's "Business Without You" can own that both the generalists (Hormozi/Cardone) and the existing trade coaches miss.

Research note on method and limits

- Primary tools used: live web search and full-page scrape of every coach's own site plus third-party review roundups and podcast/show-note pages. Pricing was triangulated from each coach's own page where shown, and from disclosure blogs and forum posts where the coach hides price behind a "book a call."
 - Reddit was unreachable from this environment (both the public JSON API and the search crawler are IP-blocked for reddit.com), so direct r/HVAC / r/Construction owner sentiment could not be pulled first-hand. X/Grok and Supadata (YouTube) were also unavailable (missing keys/module in this environment). Contractor sentiment below is therefore sourced from accessible channels: third-party coach-review roundups, the coaches' own framing of the "before" pain state, exit-advisory write-ups, and podcast show notes. Treat the sentiment findings at slightly lower confidence than the pricing findings, which are well-triangulated.
 - Where a price is a single forum disclosure (e.g. Nexstar), it is flagged Medium confidence. Where it is on the coach's own published page (BTA, Contractor Fight, Al Levi, Tommy Mello Growth), it is High.

Executive Summary

The blue-collar coaching market is crowded but lopsided. It splits into five segments, and almost all the money and attention sits on two promises: (1) more leads / close more / charge more (sales) and (2) systemize so you can scale and step back (operations/SOPs). There is a large, mature middle: group-coaching memberships priced $200–$3,000/month (Contractor Fight $697/mo, Breakthrough Academy $999–$2,999/mo, Tommy Mello's content tier $199/mo), peer networks priced as annual dues ($21K year-one for Nexstar), and one-time systems products (Al Levi's SOP manuals at $9,997).

Three things stand out for Cool Hollow:

1. The "owner is the bottleneck / step out of the day-to-day / know your numbers / work fewer hours" promise is NOT white space — Breakthrough Academy already owns it hard ("You can't outwork an unsystemized business," "+69% net profit, 8 hours less/week, wearing the owner's hat not all the hats"). So "a business that runs without you" alone is not a wedge against the trade coaches. It is only a wedge against Hormozi/Cardone, who are generalists.
2. The genuine white space is the FINANCE / hidden-profit angle delivered as a fast, cheap, coaching program by real operators who run a finance/advisory firm. The finance lane in trades is currently split between (a) generalist coaches who mention "know your numbers" but aren't finance firms, and (b) a fast-growing fractional-CFO-for-contractors category (Profitability Partners, DAAXIT, Oryx Horn, CEO Finance Academy) that owns the credibility but sells ongoing done-for-you CFO work at $3,000–$7,000/month — not a 12-week program that teaches the owner and gets them out of the seat. Nobody is cleanly occupying "finance-firm-grade hidden-profit + the owner gets their life back, in 12 weeks, for $5K."
3. Pricing: $5K for 12 weeks is well-positioned as an entry wedge — it sits below a year of any serious group program (Contractor Fight ~$8.4K/yr, BTA ~$17K–$41K over the term incl. the $5,700 onboarding) and far below the fractional-CFO firms ($36K–$84K/yr). The risk is the opposite: $5K can read as cheap/low-status to a $5M owner used to five-figure commitments, so it must be framed as the diagnostic/first-result phase, not the whole relationship. Tier 2 at $22K/yr is competitive — it lands between Nexstar ($21K yr-1) and a fractional CFO, and undercuts the CFO firms while adding strategy + community.

The recommended position: "The finance firm that gets the owner out of the business — find the $50K already hidden in your numbers and buy back 15 hours, in 12 weeks." Lead with the P&L/hidden-profit proof (which no group coach can credibly own and no CFO firm packages as a fast program), use "runs without you" as the outcome, and use real operators-who-are-also-a-finance-firm as the credibility that beats both the motivational trade coaches and the suit-wearing consultants.

Key Findings: dominant promises & pricing norms

Finding 1 — The niche's two dominant promises are SALES and SYSTEMS, not FINANCE-as-a-diagnostic Claim: Across the field, the money concentrates on "get more leads / close more / charge more" (Contractor Fight, all the roofing-sales coaches, Sandler/Close It Now) and "systemize so you can scale and step back" (Breakthrough Academy, Al Levi, CertainPath). "Know your numbers" appears everywhere as a supporting line but almost never as the lead diagnostic that finds hidden money.

Evidence: Contractor Fight Battleground centers on "master the sale, charge profitable prices" and the Shin-Fu sales system. BTA leads with "You can't outwork an unsystemized business." Al Levi sells operating manuals. The roofing roundup is dominated by sales coaches (Switzer, Bensman, Close It Now). CertainPath says "More profit" but proves it with testimonials, not a P&L analysis offer.

Confidence: High.

Finding 2 — "Owner is the bottleneck / step out / fewer hours / know your numbers" is ALREADY OWNED by Breakthrough Academy

Claim: The "business runs without you" promise is not white space against the trade coaches. BTA has productized it precisely, with quantified outcomes.

Evidence (verbatim): "You can't outwork an unsystemized business"; before/after framing "Wearing all the hats" → "Wearing the owner's hat"; "Step out of the day-to-day, focus on the bigger picture, and make more money in less time"; claims "+25% revenue, +69% net profit, 8 hrs worked less/week, 416 hours saved/year"; "Know your numbers and make data-driven decisions." Contractor Fight independently uses "stop being the bottleneck and start being the CEO."

Confidence: High.

Sources: btacademy.com; btacademy.com/blog/how-much-does-breakthrough-academy-cost; thecontractorfight.com/private-battleground/.

Implication: Our differentiation can't rest on "runs without you" as the headline versus these players. It must rest on the mechanism (a finance-firm hidden-profit diagnostic) and the proof source (real operators who run an advisory firm), with "runs without you / 15 hours back" as the outcome.

Finding 3 — A fractional-CFO-for-contractors category owns the finance credibility but sells it as expensive ongoing service, not a fast program

Claim: The closest competitors to Cool Hollow's exact intersection (finance + owner-dependence + value) are the fractional-CFO firms — but they sell monthly done-for-you work, not a 12-week teach-the-owner program, and they price 6–14x higher per year.

Evidence: DAAXIT: "Turn Financial Chaos Into Predictable Profit and Exit-Ready Clarity... install financial systems that guarantee profitability, reduce owner dependence, and increase enterprise value" (serves ~$18M–$90M). Profitability Partners: ex-PE, "reviewed financials on 200+ home-services acquisitions," fix margins + exit value. Oryx Horn: McKinsey/PE background, owner-operators $1M–$15M. CEO Finance Academy: contractors $1M–$20M. Category pricing ~$3,000–$7,000/month.

Confidence: High (multiple firms; price range from category write-up).

Sources: daaxit.com; profitabilitypartners.io; oryx-horn.com; ceofinanceacademy.com; myhvacooffice.com.

Implication: This validates the demand for finance-led help AND leaves open the exact gap we want: a fast, productized, coached version with the owner-freedom outcome at a fraction of the annual cost. Cool Hollow's "real advisory firm" is the credibility moat that lets us play in this lane without being a generic coach — while the CFO firms can't easily become a $5K/12-week coaching brand without cannibalizing their $5K/mo retainers.

Finding 4 — Pricing norms: monthly memberships ($200–$3K/mo), annual network dues ($7K–$21K), one-time products ($10K), and per-month CFO retainers ($3K–$7K)

Claim: Trades owners are demonstrably willing to pay four- and five-figure annual sums for business help; the dominant structure is recurring (monthly or annual), not a single 12-week price.

Evidence: Tommy Mello Growth $199/mo; Contractor Fight $697/mo (~$8.4K/yr); BTA $5,700 + $999–$2,999/mo on a 3-yr term (~$17K–$41K over the first year+); Nexstar ~$21K yr-1 / ~$7K after; Al Levi $9,997 one-time; fractional CFO $3K–$7K/mo.

Confidence: High for the published prices; Medium for Nexstar (forum-disclosed).

Sources: get.homeservicefreedom.com/growth-program; thecontractorfight.com/private-battleground/; btacademy.com/blog/how-much-does-breakthrough-academy-cost; electrical-contractor.net forum (Nexstar); 7powercontractor.com.

Implication: A standalone $5K/12-week price is unusual structurally (most are recurring). That's an opportunity (low-commitment entry) and a risk (reads as one-and-done / low-status). Frame it as Phase 1 with a clear Tier-2 continuation.

Finding 5 — The language and proof that move trades owners: peer operators, real numbers, anti-suit, ROI

Claim: This audience is openly skeptical of "consultants in suits" and responds to (a) coaches who ran a real trades business, (b) specific dollar/percentage outcomes, and (c) no-fluff, blue-collar tone.

Evidence: Contractor Fight's whole identity is "contractors built by contractors (not business consultants in suits)" and "bringing respect back to the trades." CertainPath proves with member dollar figures ($30M+, 78–88% close, 20–31% net). BTA leads with quantified outcomes. The fractional-CFO firms lead with operator/PE credibility and EBITDA/exit multiples (DAAXIT "exited at 12X EBITDA"). The roofing roundup flags pure-motivation programs (Blue Collar Success Group: "shallow sales thinking; motivational only") as a weakness — owners want substance, not pep talks.

Confidence: High on the pattern; Medium on intensity (no first-hand Reddit/forum sentiment available).

Sources: thecontractorfight.com/private-battleground/; mycertainpath.com; daaxit.com; questionfirstgroup.com/best-sales-training-companies-for-home-services-2026-edition/.

Finding 6 — "Runs without you" is the spine of the EXIT/sellability conversation — an adjacent demand pool

Claim: Owner-dependence is framed by exit advisors as the #1 valuation killer, and "build it like it's already for sale / runs without you" is the core message. This is a second, wealthier demand pool that overlaps our promise.

Evidence: Dominion Business Advisors and Profitability Partners: buyers "see risk when a business depends too heavily on its owner... buyers don't want to purchase burnout"; best exits are "decided two to four years before... when an owner starts running the business like it's already for sale." Lance Bachmann's entire brand is "Build It To Sell It."

Confidence: High.

Sources: dominionbusinessadvisors.com/post/from-wrenches-to-wealth...; profitabilitypartners.io/exit-preparation/; buildittosellit.com.

Implication: Tier 2 ("10x is easier than 2x," scaling, tax, investment) can naturally annex the exit/enterprise-value narrative — a credible bridge to higher-revenue owners and a reason the relationship continues past the $5K Tier 1.

White Space Analysis

Plot the field on two axes: what's the lead promise (Sales/Leads ↔ Systems/Ops ↔ Finance/Profit) and delivery model (DIY content ↔ Group coaching ↔ Done-for-you service).

- Sales/Leads, group/program: Crowded. Contractor Fight, every roofing-sales coach, Sandler, Close It Now.
- Systems/Ops, group/program: Crowded and well-defended. Breakthrough Academy (the category king of "step out / fewer hours"), CertainPath, Al Levi (DIY product).
- Peer network / dues: Owned by Nexstar, CertainPath, Service Roundtable.
- Finance/Profit, done-for-you service: Fast-growing, credible, but expensive and ongoing — Profitability Partners, DAAXIT, Oryx Horn, CEO Finance Academy. They own credibility but not a fast, coached, owner-freedom program.
- Finance/Profit, group coaching PROGRAM, fast, with owner-freedom outcome, by real operators-who-are-a-finance-firm: EMPTY. No one is sitting here.

The white space is the intersection of four things, and no single competitor holds all four:

1. Finance-firm-grade credibility (the advisory firm, real P&L work) — held by the CFO firms, not by the coaches.
2. A fast, productized program (12 weeks, fixed scope, a result you can feel) — held by the coaches, not by the CFO firms (who sell open-ended retainers).

3. The owner-freedom outcome ("15 hours back," runs without you) — held by BTA/Contractor Fight, not by the CFO firms.
4. A try-before-you-buy hidden-profit diagnostic (upload a P&L, see leakage) — held by no one as a front door. The CFO firms gate everything behind a sales call; the coaches prove with testimonials.

Cool Hollow can be the only player holding all four. The hidden-profit analyzer (P&L upload → leakage + hidden profit) is the wedge that none of them have, and it's exactly the thing a real finance/advisory firm is uniquely credible to offer.

Where the generalists (Hormozi/Cardone) lose: not trades-native, no "I ran a contracting business" proof, no P&L diagnostic, no finance firm behind them. Beating them is easy on credibility and specificity.

Where the trade coaches lose: they're sales- or systems-led, not finance-led; none can credibly run a real P&L analysis; "know your numbers" is a slogan, not a service. Beating them requires us to NOT compete as "another coach who'll get you out of the business" (BTA already won that) but as "the finance firm that finds the money and gets you out of the business."

Where the CFO firms lose: they sell expensive, open-ended, done-for-you bookkeeping/CFO retainers to bigger or more finance-aware owners; they don't package a fast, coached, owner-freedom program with a free diagnostic front door, and they don't build community or speak the blue-collar, time-back language that wins the $1M–$10M owner who's still in the truck.

Unique Positioning Recommendation for Business Without You

One-sentence positioning statement:

"Business Without You is the finance-firm-built program that finds the $50,000 already hidden in your P&L and uses it to buy back 15 hours of your week — so in 12 weeks your trade business starts running without you, proven by real operators who do this for a living, not consultants in suits."

Short tagline options:

- "Find the money. Get your time back. Build a business that runs without you."
- "We're not coaches who talk about your numbers. We're the finance firm that fixes them."

3–5 proof points to lead with:

1. The hidden-profit analyzer (free front door). Upload a P&L, see where the money's leaking and the $50K+ that's hiding. No competitor offers a finance-grade diagnostic as a try-before-you-buy. This is the single strongest wedge — it proves the finance claim before any pitch.
2. A real finance/advisory firm behind it (Cool Hollow Solutions: ~35 clients, ~$60K/month, in-person advisory). The CFO firms have credibility but no fast program; the coaches have programs but no firm. We have both.
3. The $50K-found vs $5K-price math. When the program surfaces profit the owner didn't know was there, the price stops being a question. Use specific, real client dollar figures (never invented) the way CertainPath and the CFO firms do — this audience buys ROI, not aspiration.
4. "15 hours back" / Milestone 1 (reclaim the owner's time) up front. The real objection in trades is time, not price (per our own offer research). Lead the time-back reframe early, the way BTA leads "8 hours less/week" — but tie it to the money found, which they don't.
5. Operators, not suits. Mark on camera, real-business proof, plain-spoken blue-collar tone. This neutralizes Contractor Fight's "built by contractors" moat and the audience's anti-consultant reflex.

How we differ from BOTH camps (say this explicitly in copy):

- vs Hormozi/Cardone (generalists): "They teach offers and mindset to everyone. We're a finance firm that only works with trade owners and starts by finding money in your actual P&L."
- vs Contractor Fight / BTA (trade coaches): "They'll help you systemize and sell better. We start one level deeper — in your numbers — and find the profit that funds everything else, then get you out of the seat."
- vs the fractional-CFO firms: "They'll run your finances for $3,000–$7,000 a month, forever. We hand you the result in 12 weeks for $5,000 and teach you to keep it — then stay on at Tier 2 only if you want the bigger game."

Pricing Sanity Check on $5K (Tier 1) and $22K/yr (Tier 2)

Tier 1 — $5,000 / 12 weeks:

- Against annual recurring programs, it's cheap-to-fair as an entry: Contractor Fight ~$8.4K/yr, BTA ~$17K–$41K over the first year+ (and 3-yr lock-in), Nexstar ~$21K yr-1, fractional CFO $36K–$84K/yr. A bounded $5K/12-week price is the lowest-commitment serious option in the market.
- Structural oddity = both edge and risk. Almost everyone sells recurring; a one-time $5K reads as low-commitment (good for conversion) but can read as low-status to a $5M owner used to five-figure relationships. Mitigation: position $5K as the diagnostic + first result phase (find the money, buy back the first hours), with Tier 2 as the obvious continuation. The "$50K found vs $5K paid" frame makes $5K feel like a rounding error, which is the whole point — keep that math front and center so the low price reads as confidence, not cheapness.
- Verdict: Well-positioned as a wedge. Do not raise it now (pre-launch, no testimonials); the low price is the risk-reversal. Consider a modest performance/anchor frame ("we typically find $50K+; the program is $5K").

Tier 2 — $22,000 / year:

- Lands in a credible, defensible band. Above Nexstar's ongoing (~$7K/yr) and BTA's mid tier (~$24K/yr at $1,999/mo), comparable to BTA Pro (~$36K/yr at $2,999/mo), and below the fractional-CFO firms ($36K–$84K/yr) — while bundling strategy, tax/investment, community, 1–2 live sessions/week and the full team (CFO/COO/HR + Mark). For a $10M+ owner, $22K/yr is a small line item and cheaper than a part-time CFO while offering more.

- "10x is easier than 2x" + exit/enterprise-value narrative (Finding 6) gives Tier 2 a wealthier-owner story the trade coaches don't push and the CFO firms only imply.

- Verdict: Competitive and arguably underpriced for the team involved. Defensible to nudge toward $25K–$30K once proof exists; hold $22K at launch to win early logos.

One caution: the gap from $5K (Tier 1) to $22K (Tier 2) is a 4.4x jump. Make sure there's a clear value staircase (the $50K found in Tier 1 funds Tier 2) or consider a mid bridge later. Not urgent pre-launch.

Confidence summary

- High confidence: published pricing (BTA, Contractor Fight, Tommy Mello Growth, Al Levi, fractional-CFO range); the BTA "owner-bottleneck/fewer-hours" ownership; the existence and shape of the fractional-CFO-for-contractors category; the finance-as-diagnostic white space.
- Medium confidence: Nexstar exact price (single forum source); CertainPath/Lance Bachmann/Tommy Mello higher-tier prices (gated behind sales calls); contractor sentiment intensity (no first-hand Reddit/X/YouTube available this run).
- Recommended follow-up when tools allow: pull r/HVAC, r/Construction, r/Plumbing first-hand sentiment on BTA/Contractor Fight/Nexstar ("worth it?"), and Tommy Mello / Contractor Fight podcast transcripts, to validate the anti-suit + ROI language and confirm the time-vs-price objection in the owners' own words.
