What this answers: how we build it, how we run it for clients, how we price it against the coaching, and how it fits with the seven-tool suite.

◆ Part 1: How we build it (one-time, done once)

This is the heavy lifting, and it only happens once. After this, every new client is a quick clone.

1. Open the GoHighLevel account. Start on the $97 plan for the pilot. One account holds every client.
2. Build one master setup. Inside it: the instant missed-call text, the qualifying questions, the calendar booking, the quote-chaser, and the weekly recovered-money recap. This is where the real work is.
3. Test it to death on your own phone and a dummy number until it's flawless.
4. Save it as a snapshot. A snapshot is a frozen copy of the whole setup.
From here on, a new client is "apply snapshot, fill in their details," not "build from scratch."

That's the build. It's a one-time job, done by your builder, with you watching so you understand it.

◆ Part 2: How we run it for a client (repeatable, the part that scales)

Every new client follows the same short path. This is the bit that becomes the business.

1. Onboard (10 minutes with the owner). Collect: business name, owner name, trade, area served, business hours, and the phone number they want it on. One short form or a quick call.
2. Clone their account from the snapshot. Two minutes.
3. Fill in their blanks. Their name and trade drop into the text templates automatically. Every text now sounds like them.
4. Connect their phone and calendar. Either we give them a fresh business number, or we forward their existing line so missed calls flow into the system. A 2-minute step we walk them through.
5. Register them for business texting (A2P). A one-time compliance form. We handle it.
6. Go live and send a test. They miss a test call, they watch the text fire, they get it. That moment sells the whole thing.
7. Then it runs itself. The owner does nothing. The weekly recap auto-sends. We monitor and handle any "can you change this word" requests.

Time per client after the build: about 15 to 20 minutes in the pilot, dropping to near-zero once SaaS mode auto-onboards them.

◆ Part 3: Who does what (and the honest scaling note)

- The one-time build (snapshot, automations, SaaS setup): your builder.
- Selling it and onboarding owners: you. This is the owner-facing, relationship part, your strength.
- Day-to-day running: light. Monitoring and the odd change request.

- At real volume (100+ clients): a part-time support person or VA handles onboarding admin, texting-registration hiccups, and owner questions. Small, known cost of scale. Not you at midnight, and not needed for a long while.

The three stages:

- Pilot: $97 plan, build it, run it by hand on 1 to 3 friendly owners, capture the first real "money recovered" numbers.
- Productize: move to the $497 SaaS plan, turn on auto-onboarding and auto-billing.
- Scale: sell it as the front door to the coaching, feed every saved job into the story bank.

◆ Part 4: How we price it

Real numbers below, anchored to what the market already charges. These are recommendations to lock together, not final.

What the market charges today:

- A human answering service: around $650 a month, and customers still dislike it.
- DIY AI receptionist tools: $59 to $300 a month, but the owner has to set them up and run them, which he won't.

Our price: cheaper than a human service, done-for-you unlike the DIY tools.

Piece	Recommended	Why
Setup fee	$497 one-time	Covers the done-for-you setup, filters tire-kickers, gives an upfront cash bump. Waive it for pilot owners in exchange for feedback.
Monthly	$149 a month	The sweet spot. One saved job covers months of it. Sits below a human service, above the throwaway tools.

Piece	Recommended	Why
Pilot offer	Free or $49/mo for the first few	In exchange for honest feedback and a real, named result we can use. The data is worth more than the early revenue.

The pitch never changes: "It pays for itself the first time it saves you one job."

◆ Part 5: How it sits with the coaching (the offer ladder)

This tool is not separate from Business Without You. It's the bottom rung of a ladder that walks an owner up to the full program.

1. Free taster (top of funnel). A guide or the hidden-profit analyzer. Costs them nothing, proves you know your stuff.
2. Never Miss a Job ($149/mo). The low-risk first "yes." It recovers real money and builds trust. This is the wedge.
3. Business Without You, Tier 1 ($5,000, 12 weeks). Once an owner has felt you put money back in his pocket, the program is an easy step up. The tool literally demonstrated milestone one (get your time and your leads out of your own hands).
4. Tier 2 ($25,000 to $35,000 a year). The owners who want the whole team and the long game.

Each rung makes the next one easier. The tool earns the right to sell the program.

Inside the program: Never Miss a Job is included and runs free for the 12 weeks of Tier 1. After the program, it converts to the $149/mo to keep running. That gives you a recurring revenue tail from every client, long after the 12 weeks end.

◆ Part 6: How it bundles with the seven tools

The program teaches seven milestones. The vision is a tool at each one that does the work for the owner, so it's done-with-you, not 1,000 videos of homework. That tool suite is your real moat against the coaches who only sell access to calls and libraries.

Milestone	The tool	Status
1. Reclaim the owner's time	Never Miss a Job (the phone is the biggest wire through the owner)	Building now
2. Define the destination	Vision and goal planner	Planned
3. Install the dashboard	The 5-metric Monday dashboard	Planned
4. Break the binding constraint	Constraint finder	Planned
5. Discover the hidden product	The hidden-profit analyzer (P&L upload)	On the roadmap
6. Cash-flow confidence	13-week cash forecast	Planned
7. Build the team	Roles and org tool	Planned

The bundle is "The Business Without You Toolkit": all seven tools, included with the program. That's the line that beats every competitor. They sell you coaching and make you do the work. You hand the owner seven tools that do the work for him.

Two of the seven also sell on their own as front doors: Never Miss a Job (recovers money live) and the hidden-profit analyzer (finds money in the books). The other five are program-only, the reason to buy the whole thing.

Build order: Never Miss a Job first, because it's the only one that makes money on day one and proves the model. The analyzer second. The rest as the program firms up.

◆ Part 7: The part that matters for your December deadline

Be blunt about this with yourself. You have a $15,000 debt due by year end and you need $2,000 to $4,000 a month to clear it.

Never Miss a Job can be that money. At $149 a month, 20 clients is roughly $3,000 a month in recurring revenue. You have a warm pool to pull from: Cool Hollow Solutions' clients and their networks are exactly the trades and home-services owners this is built for. This isn't a someday coaching dream. It's a tool you could be selling within weeks that pays the debt and warms up the coaching pipeline at the same time.

That makes the build order easy. This tool first, because it's the one that pays you now.

◆ Next steps to lock

1. Approve the pricing ($497 setup, $149/mo, free-or-cheap pilot). Change the numbers if you want, but let's set them.
2. Pick 1 to 3 pilot owners from the Cool Hollow Solutions world.
3. Open the $97 GHL account when you're ready. I'll walk you through sign-up one step at a time.
4. I build the master setup and snapshot, then we onboard your first pilot owner together.
